

Luring Them To Death

Initiative Shown by Young Officers of the British Army

"A Brigadier gave me an interesting instance of the initiative shown by very young officers," writes a correspondent. "One of his war veterans was given the task of clearing out a strong point, after closely reconnoitering the position at great personal danger, decided on this plan of campaign. He discovered two places where machine guns could be brought up and advantageously hidden. He arranged for some of our heavy artillery to shell the place, himself acting as observer. At the second shot the shells fell close in front that the defenders made a bolt to the open, where they were immediately caught by the machine guns, and then the place was taken by their strong point. Just as they did so a third shell got in a direct hit. Most of the survivors ran out and were again caught by the machine guns, and then the place was taken with the bayonet with no loss of men."

Down on Oleo
Who wants Oleo? A handful of slushy money, who would not?

In 1900 the output of oleomargarine in the United States was 107,045,028 lbs. In 1915 it was 145,668,730 lbs. Let the whole country be supplied in a short time the colored world would be a different place. The trade mark would be a cow, and the color would be a consumer to say nothing of the difficulty of keeping up to control it—Farmer's Advocate.

Use Rubber To Save Leather—It Is Needed In The War!

Rubber Supply Is Ample—Leather Is Scarce and Very High

Leather is being worn out faster today than ever before in the history of the world, while production is considerably less than a few years ago. While the consequent shortage is keenly felt by the civilian who has to pay half as much again for his family's shoes, it is even more serious for the Government, which must supply hundreds of thousands of soldiers.

Rubber, too, is being used in enormous quantities on account of the war—one British manufacturer, for instance, is working on a rubber boot order for the army which will take 140,000 pounds of rubber. The great rubber plantations in British tropical dominions, is easily keeping up with the demand, and rubber, despite a war tax of 7½%, is actually cheaper today than before the war. So, though the fabric and chemicals used cost nearly double, rubber footwear has not gone up very much in price.

These conditions naturally are leading thoughtful, thrifty, patriotic Canadians to save leather just as much as possible by wearing rubbers, overboots, high rubber boots and heavy rubber rubbers. In addition to the very substantial saving in cost, rubber footwear has decided advantages for wet or cold weather around the farm or in the woods. The men like its warm, dry comfort under all conditions, and the women like the way it sheds the dirt instead of bringing it in to mat it up and track around the house. For the children, too, particularly if they are walking a long way to school, rubbers and overboots mean a great deal in warmth, comfort and protection against colds.

"Doing Without" Rubbers or Overboots Is Simply Thoughtless Extravagance

The Crime Against Belgium

Shot and Shell the Only Argument That Is Left

It may be thought that the action of Germany in deporting the Belgian male population of Belgium has been denounced with enough severity. The reality is that the rescuers of human language have been exhausted, and that the only argument left is the only one that counts.

1914 shocked the world. Nothing remarkable could be done. Nothing was to be done. Remonstrance seemed to be useless. No argument except shot and shell seemed of any avail to reach the hard heart of those who committed or countenanced those crimes. Yet the deportation of the Belgian male population of Belgium, which have at the civil war stand against it. It is described by the military expert by the New York Times as "an act which the world has never seen before in the history of civilization," which the world has never seen before in the history of civilization.

Seek Aid for War Animals

British Society Begins Campaign to Raise $500,000 in America

The Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, of Great Britain, which is the Red Cross for dumb animals in the European war, has established an American auxiliary in New York City, and is shortly to begin a campaign to raise $500,000 in the United States with which to buy thousands of army horses, mules and mules suffering, it is stated, "as one of the conspicuously pitiful features of the war."

Under the chairmanship of the Duke of Portland, and with the patronage of the King and Queen, the Colonel Alfred Wagstaff is helping in an effort to enlarge the facilities at the various fronts for alleviating suffering among the army animals and for saving thousands of artillery horses, cavalry mounts and transport mules that otherwise would be lost.

H. Rees is the society's delegate to the United States. He has obtained the co-operation of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, whose president, Colonel Alfred Wagstaff, is helping him to form a committee of prominent Americans, headed by Henry D. Rogers, treasurer of the American society, has agreed to act in a similar capacity for the auxiliary.

"This broad and better problem is getting serious," declared the poor "eyes," asserted the magnate, "it's a shame to charge 10 cents a tin." Louisville Courier-Journal.

Our Atlantic Seaports

Canada Should Not Be Dependent Upon American Channels for Trade Movement

Now that the Canadian Government's war efforts are linked up those of from Winnipeg to Halifax, officials of that organization are more interested every year in the subject of cooperation between the East and the West.

In that connection an eastern official has recently sent to one of the West a clipping from a recent issue of the Maritime Merchant, a publication issued at Halifax. The item was as follows:

"A visitor from Ontario had inspected the terminals at Halifax and had been told of the probable expense required to complete the work planned. He had also visited St. John's, looked over the terminal work done there in the last few years, and learned about the extent of the work projected in the main harbor and Courtney Bay. Discussing the matter, he said in a jocular tone, and yet perhaps not altogether without a tinge of sarcasm, that the remark was in a sense justified: 'You people are costing us a lot of money.'"

The Halifax man to whom the remark was addressed made a reply something like this: "Do you people up there realize that if it were not for these open ports of ours your whole trade in winter would be tied or forced through foreign channels? You are not spending money, but for yourselves—the Dominion of Canada—and we pay the price."

It is not only on account of the necessity for eastern ports, but also because they now afford the shortest line and the time saving route between Western Canada and Maritime Provinces by the establishment of through passenger and service between Winnipeg and Quebec, linking up the system with the Atlantic coast, and thus enabling to reach the port at Halifax from the West in less time than before. No less convenient is the service for freight shipments, and officials of the Canadian railways predict an increasing amount of traffic each year of the present line, not only for eastbound freight, but also for westbound freight, and for the westbound movement of passengers through port at Halifax and for the Maritime Provinces.

HOCKEY GAME

The hockey season opened on New Year's afternoon with the very first game between Nanton and Stavelly which resulted in a win for Stavelly by 8 goals to 5. Both teams presented very evenly balanced teams and considering the state of the ice the game was well played. The first storm of the night before left it in bad shape and both teams tried towards the finish. Nanton has a much faster team than last year and while some of the players are light still they make it up in speed. Stavelly has a much heavier team and when in condition they will have a strong evenly balanced aggregation. The return game will be played in Nanton next week and if weather is fine a good crowd will accompany the boys. Line up:

Nanton: South, Goal, Stavelly.

Faulkner, Point, Nanton.

Stanton, C. Point, Melrose.

Ball, Lyons, R. Wing, Barker.

Silbert, Centre, Hanson.

Jones, L. Wing, Amundson.

Referee: Smith. Attendance 260.

THE WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC INAUGURATED IN OCCUPIED BELGIUM BY THE GERMANS

(An interview with the Minister of Justice for Belgium.)

The Rein de Paris publishes, in its edition of November 8, 1916, the following interview with Mr. H. Carton de Wiart, the Belgian minister of justice, concerning the removal, deportations and compulsory work imposed upon numerous Belgian civilians by the high German authority.

It is only too true, declared Mr. Carton de Wiart, that the German authority is actually proceeding in Belgium, throughout the whole military area, in veritable raffles of men which are a reproduction, but on a still larger scale, of the crimes perpetrated a few months ago, under the presence of agricultural labor to be done, in the invaded regions of France. About the middle of November 8, 1916, the signature of the Quartermaster-General von Sauterwitz, as posted in our Hainault and Flanders communes, that decree stipulates that all persons who are able-bodied and who have resources, or their families, to "better people's all," may be forcibly compelled to work, even outside of their own domicile. The decree further states that any refusal to submit to the obligation, shall be subject to a penalty of three years' imprisonment, as a maximum, and of a fine of 10,000 marks, or to one of the other penalty cells.

To fully realize the abominable character of such a compulsion, it must be remembered that, owing to the departure of so many Belgians whom their military obligations have kept away from their homes for more than two years already and to the almost complete standstill of our industries and manufactures, one-third of our population are being assigned by the (rebel) communes. The latter, with the cooperation of the Belgian government and of the allies, and the intervention of both Spain and the United States, are taking upon themselves an enormous obligation which, strictly speaking, should be exclusively assumed by the compelling power.

As soon as this notice had been duly posted, our fellow citizens whom the decree concerned were summoned in throngs at a time, in Courtrai, in Ghent, in Bruges, in Termonde and in Alost, and in several other localities, to the barracks, warehouses and empty mills and factories. Those who did not willingly answer the summons were seized and arrested in their lodgings and forcibly conveyed to the official rendezvous. For the city of Ghent alone they numbered almost 3,000 people, composed not only of workmen, unemployed or not, but also of numerous clerks and petty dealers and employers. They were all examined, sorted over and manipulated, one after the other, just as if they had been on a routine slave market. The less robust were eliminated and put aside. As to the rest, they were required to sign a document, all printed in German, by which they engaged themselves to work under orders of German authorities. All the means of coercion and pressure were resorted to in order to obtain their signature. In order to obtain their signature, they were subjected to various other acts of brutality. They refused. In spite of the refusal, they were arrested and deported, towards unknown destinations. Every one who was authorized to provide them with a small bundle of clothing and food, was forbidden to do so. The official notice giving them that information added, "extremely admirable irony" "Case will be allowed to be taken into account."

Long lines of trains, all packed to the doors, thus went across Belgium, running in an eastern direction. And all along the railroad lines, these grave people, who had thus been pulled away from the houses and farms of the German bayonets, from their homes, from their families, and from their native land, could be heard singing in a chorus, and never seemingly growing weary the Marseillaise, and the Marseillaise Leuven (the Lion of Flanders), the first verses of which—Franchement them from the Flamande, are by themselves alone, most characteristic. "They will not have him, our proud Lion of Flanders!"

"An Admirable 'Scrap of Paper'"

Now see, says to Mr. Carton de Wiart, here is among several other similar documents, a small note scribbled in lead pencil, and signed by one of these workmen. It was thrown by which from a car window while the train was passing through a village in the Brabant. And in its plainness and confidence, this "scrap of paper" (scrap of paper) contains a message which, in my opinion, is far above all the pride of the German Kultur.

Voilà de Duitcheles werken moet nog veel van mijn naam op papier. Love Albert, Konink der Belgen.

That is to say, "Work for the Germans, never! and less still sign any papers for them!" Love Albert, King of the Belgians!

Oh, didn't the brave people! We could well be proud of him and of our common magistrates of whom some day, the whole world will know the full heroism and patriotism.

Their Real Object

The object of such an infamy cannot be to deceive anyone. In the course of a statement made in the Reichstag, Mr. Hoffert has tried to insinuate that if these unfortunate people were being thus deported, it was for their own welfare and in order to not expose them to the risk of illness. And the German press immediately followed suit and repeat as a truism such an impudent explanation. As a matter of fact, these crimes are the result of the German policy as did the "bluff" imagined to exist formerly the Poles in the German army. It is the case created in Germany by the increasing deficiency of effective forces. The German staff try to make up for it by restoring by Belgian manual labor, whose technical value is well known, but in whom no other right is granted except that of bearing German workmen who can thus be detached and sent off to the front. This obvious and extreme expedient the more so the progress of their wearing out that it rapidly contradicts their political tactics. How is it possible to conciliate such an attitude with the hypocritical pretension which the German chancellor had solemnly announced in his speech of April 8, 1916, when he stated: "Germany will not abandon its civilization, the Poles are people so long enslaved." Does he believe that, even in the most general countries, these people that they have so worried their indignation or discouraged their contempt, that any thing and everything may now be permitted them to do. But here, again, they have themselves. For now, this is a crime which cannot be excused by the blindness and the passion which accompany actual and real military operations. And, for my part, I refuse to believe that, even in the most general countries, these people will remain indifferent to the peril and to the aggravation in the midst of the twentieth century of the methods which were practiced in times of peace by the barbarian pirates and the African traders. Such a neutrality in respect to the expression, would not justify the name of human. Humanity has not ceased to be human. In spite of all, we still trust in her.
